THE CITY OF SAN DIEGO

MEMORANDUM

DATE: October 9, 2018

TO: Joe Craver, Chair, Community Review Board on Police Practices
Sharmaine Moseley, Executive Director, Community Review Board on Police Practices

FROM: David Nisleit, Chief of Police, San Diego Police Department

SUBJECT: Response to Recommendations from the Community Review Board on Police Practices regarding San Diego Police Department's use of the carotid restraint.

I received a memo from the Community Review Board on Police Practices (CRB), dated May 24, 2018, recommending changes to the San Diego Police Department's use of the carotid restraint. The recommendation was:

"The CRB recommends that the San Diego Police Department ("SDPD") remove the Carotid Restraint from SDPD's Use of Force Department Procedure 1.04 for Active Resistance Behavior and retain for Assaultive or Life-Threatening Behavior. If SDPD uses the Carotid Restraint on a person, the person must be transferred immediately to a medical facility."

The San Diego Police Department acknowledges the concerns expressed by members of the community regarding its use of the carotid restraint. Since implementation decades ago, there has been a lack of information and education provided by law enforcement agencies about neck restraints and when they are used, as well as used inappropriately with undesirable outcomes. This void of information is compounded by media reports which conflate chokeholds and carotid restraints as the same force technique, and by a lack of historical data collection in law enforcement that provides information about how force is used and under what circumstances. It all leads to anger and mistrust within the community.

The following items were reviewed for this memo: 2,239 deaths between 2015-2016 from police encounters nationwide detailed in The Counted, 406 cases analyzed where the carotid restraint was applied by SDPD officers between 2013-2017, a review of relevant medical literature, recommendations from the leading police organizations and the Department of Justice, as well as concerns and policy recommendations expressed by police reform advocates. All of this, along with a review of over 100 use of force policies from departments around the country, were utilized to develop the following recommendations.

It is believed the implementation of these recommendations into Department policies and procedures reflect the right thing to do for the City of the San Diego, this Department and the citizens we proudly serve.

The San Diego Police Department Use of Force procedures could be improved upon by doing the following:

- 1) The Final Report of the President's Task force on 21st Century Policing encourages law enforcement agencies to have clear and comprehensive policies regarding the use of force. To accomplish this goal, chokeholds should be plainly defined under 1.08 – Carotid Restraint – and strictly prohibited with the exception for their use in deadly force situations. Only carotid restraint is expressly defined in this procedure.
- 2) Currently, subjects who exhibit symptoms of medical distress or those who are rendered unconscious through the use of the carotid restraint shall be transported to a contract hospital for a medical examination prior to a final disposition. The Department procedure will be updated to require medical examinations following each application of the carotid restraint where pressure is applied to the neck. This force option should also be prohibited for use on high risk persons as other agencies have already done including: the elderly, obvious juveniles and pregnant females.
- 3) A review of law enforcement encounters from The Counted, as well as SDPD's internal data on applications of carotid restraints, indicate this force option is valuable and safe when properly applied.¹ It needs to remain under Greater Controlling Force. This will continue to prevent subjects from escalating behavior into assaultive and life-threatening situations where officers respond in kind. Additional descriptive language should also be added to 1.08 – Carotid Restraint – that further explains situations in which this force option would be appropriate.
- 4) Require officers to de-escalate situations, when possible, before using force and incorporate this language into Department Procedure 1.04 – Use of Force. This is already beginning in many law enforcement agencies throughout the nation and language can be developed that fits within the culture of the San Diego Police Department.
- 5) Require officers to intervene if they observe another officer using excessive force and specifically add this mandate into Department Procedure 1.04 – Use of Force.
- 6) Develop comprehensive reports on use of force and threats of force that can be published online annually and are readily available. While these do not have to be as comprehensive as those published by some agencies, like the Los Angeles Police Department, they should provide value to citizens seeking use of force information and transparency from our Department.

Joe Craver, Chair, Community Review Board on Police Practices

Sharmaine Moseley, Executive Director, Community Review Board on Police Practices

October 9, 2018

- 7) Since carotid restraint training is typically provided during AOT cycles, ensure the short online training video being developed by the training staff on Success Factors is implemented as quickly as possible so refresher training can be provided annually.
- 8) The National Use-of-Force Data Collection Portal, developed by the FBI, is gathering data about incidents in which police officers use force that results in death or serious bodily injury of a person and incidents of police officers discharging firearms at or in the direction of a person. The FBI plans to publish the nationally collected data twice a year. The San Diego Police Department must take full advantage of the benefits offered by this program, since the data may prove invaluable as the Department continually reviews its use of force policies.
- 9) While the leading research into carotid restraints find they are safe when appropriately used by trained officers, the Department must remain vigilant and continue to evaluate the latest medical and professional studies related to the application of this force option.

These recommendations are a reflection of the need to take into consideration concerns expressed by the community, while continuing to provide officers from our Department with the tools to prevent the occurrence of deadly force situations wherever possible in order to safeguard lives.

I appreciate the Community Review Board on Police Practices and want to thank them for bringing this recommendation forward for my consideration.
